MOBILE SCREENING CAMP

Mobile eye screening camps provide free eye checks and raise awareness of eye health, hygiene and care.

Medication and minor surgical treatment is provided for patients by the screening service but further investigation and surgery is referred to our hospitals.

The mobile screening programme enables us to reach remote rural communities and socially and economically deprived urban areas with little access to good quality health care.

SPONSORSHIP PACKAGE

Eye screening for 500 patients and 60 minor surgical procedures
Cost: Rs 277,750 (£1,700 approx)

- Surgical costs & medical team salaries
- Transport for Layton Rahmatulla Benevolent Trust (LRBT) medical team and equipment

SADIA'S EYE CAMP

"I had a fantastic time working alongside GLT and LRBT's clinical team. They were professional, helpful and highly skilled. Thank you for giving me this opportunity. Truly a humbling experience."

- Sadia

Sadia Warsi travelled to Pakistan after surpassing her target of raising £2,300 to run an eyecamp in Gujar Khan, Rawalpindi. Sadia was joined by Dr Sofia Usman, an Ophthalmologist from Kings College London. Facilities included free provision of:

- * Eye examinations
- * Medicine
- * Refraction and prescription of glasses

300 patients were seen in just two days with 100 prescription glasses offered, 35 cataract surgery referrals, and 9 other ophthalmic surgeries took place at LRBT Mandra Hospital.

ANSAR'S EYE CAMP

Ansar Rafiq successfully raised £3,000+ to fund two eye screening camps in rural areas close to home in Pakistan.

Ansar flew from London to Islamabad, and then travelled with our medical team to undertake a camp in Khari Sharif, a rural area of Kashmir, followed by a second camp in Chak Mew in Jhelum, Punjab.

Eye screening camps protect, promote, and maintain health and prevent disease and disability. In this instance, over 300 patients were seen in total for both camps, with 32 operations completed.

Thanks to Ansar, essential care was able to reach rural areas with little access to high quality eye care.

"I previously organised an eye camp with GLT a few years ago and wanted to do it again. The experience is incredible and I hope to do more in the future." - Ansar
